

Aurum's Effect On Depression

The name comes from the Latin 'aurum,' that means gold. Aurum is largely a soft metal that is chemically unreactive. It is an example of the few elements that happens in a natural state. It is understood to dissolve in royal water, which is a mix of hydrochloric acid and nitric acid.

Aurum can be simply beaten into thin sheets, known as gold leaf. It may be employed as an architectural or paper ornament. It's also often used to make electronics and to paint glass to make it reflect heat. The majority of the gold is mined in Russia and SA and stored as bullion. The aurum personality talks sparingly and is serious. The aurum personality tends to be extraordinarily responsible and is quick to be offended. The aurum personality does like to be doubted, is consistent and always in a hurry. The aurum personality has an inner strength that is quickly intuited by others.

A catalogue of traits of the aurum personality. There are a lot of personality traits that correlate to the aurum personality. An individual with an aurum personality is susceptible to keeping their feelings, especially fury, hidden within. Traditionally , aurum was employed by Arabian physicians in the 12th century to treat heart conditions. It wasn't used again till the early 20 th century in the treatment of tuberculosis and as a blood test for syphilis.

In homeopathic medication, aurum is used to treat everything from depression to heart illness. Aurum in the treatment of depression and psychological sickness. Aurum is sometimes used to treat depression that is accompanied with suicidal thoughts. Aurum should be taken with care and only a minute dose should be taken. A homeopath could also use aurum to help increase blood circulation and for treating headaches. As with all homeopathic treatments, treatment should be short-term, lasting at most some weeks.

About the Author

Svanfridur Hagvaag lives and writes on a small farm in southern Iceland. To get more information visit her site www.naturaldepressioncure.com cure

Source: <http://www.eatsee.com>