

Symptoms Of Hemorrhoids

There are a lot of things that we still need to educate our people about. As we take a look into the world of medicine, there are a lot of diseases which people don't know about until they find themselves on the operation table. One of these diseases, that we need to educate people about, is the Hemorrhoids. Let's take a look into the symptoms of Hemorrhoids so all of us can get to know about this. A few of the most common symptoms that you will see in all the affected people are the severe pain, itching and irritation in your anal area. Some of the other symptoms that you see are the painless bleeding while the bowel movements, leakage of feces and a sensitive or a painful lump near your anus. Now a lot of people don't know the fact that there are 2 types of Hemorrhoids. One of them is the Internal and the other is the External. Now as we talk about the symptoms of the internal Hemorrhoids, they include severe pain, itch and bleeding. Here you also need to keep in mind that these Hemorrhoids are mainly under the skin around your anus. Now as we take a look in to the Internal Hemorrhoids, the first thing that you need to know about these hemorrhoids is that they are not visible and neither can you feel them. You can't see or feel them unless you pass stool and injure the delicate skin of the Hemorrhoids. If you have injured the Hemorrhoid, they will continue to bleed and in occasional cases they might get pushed out while passing stool. These kinds of Hemorrhoids are known as the prolapsed Hemorrhoids and they can cause some severe pain and irritation. Above are the symptoms that you must always keep in mind so that you can consult a doctor as soon as you can.

About the Author

Thomas has been writing Health, Wellness and Fitness articles for many years. His website Healthy Lifestyle has varieties of health related articles advocate people to have a healthy lifestyle.

Source: <http://www.eatsee.com>