

Buying Prescription Drugs without a Prescription

While many countries require a prescription to purchase medication, there are some that don't. In these countries, you can purchase any drug you want without a doctor's order. Few people know about this, however, and even fewer know how to go about buying prescription drugs from a reliable company. There are some drugs that are not regulated, so you don't need a prescription to purchase them in any country. They include things like alternative medicine, herbs, vitamins, nutritional supplements, and other non-medication drugs. You can purchase many of these from health food stores or places that sell alternative medication. However, because they are not regulated, there is no guarantee that they will do what they say they do. Many so-called herbal medications and nutritional supplements claim they can cure you of any disease or perform miracles such as helping you drop weight quickly. In reality, many of these products don't do much at all, but because they aren't regulated, they can say whatever they want in an attempt to make more money. If you need something more powerful or something more reliable, however, you may need a prescription drug. But these drugs, even the generic versions, are often very expensive. How does one get a prescription drug without a doctor prescribing it? And is such a thing even legal? Well, with the internet, yes. It's also sometimes necessary many people can't afford prescription drugs, and others may not be able to see a doctor to get a prescription. One can easily purchase drugs from any country using the internet, which means they can buy drugs from countries without prescription laws. Often, even when you include international shipping costs, it's much cheaper to purchase prescription drugs online than to buy them from a store. This is because there are fewer costs to be added in (distribution, sells, etc.) and because these drugs can be produced cheaper in other countries. Most often, the drugs are just as effective as the brand name products you'd buy at the local pharmacy. Of course, you do have to be careful when you buy drugs from these online pharmacies. Some of them are scams that just want to take your money. Some also sell drugs that aren't completely legitimate. While they may not be harmful, you may not get any benefit from these drugs. You may also experience unexpected side effects from using prescription drugs without a doctor's approval. This is because doctors often look at your family history and at any other medications you're currently on to make certain that the drugs they prescribe will not interact with any others you're taking. Generally, purchasing drugs from an online pharmacy without a prescription is very safe once you've done a bit of research. Check to make certain the drugs you're buying won't have side effects, and do a bit of research into the company to make certain they're not a scam. That's really all it takes to start saving on your medication.
